I Left the Gate Open (and Bailey Walked in)

Editorial by Alex. H. Washburn

FOUR years ago when this newspaper was trying to unseat Hal Norwood because of scandalous fee practices in the attorney general's office I introduced his opponent, Carl Bailey, to a Hope audience.

Politically unknown, Mr. Bailey was before the people strictly on faith. All those things Mr. Norwood had done to outrage us, Mr. Bailey promised not to do—and the people believed in him and elected him.

Two years ago Mr. Bailey bid for the governor's office, again saying that all those things Ed McDonald was doing with the state's employes he would not do—and again the people believed in him and elected him.

The power of a people's belief is reflected in the election figures. Hempstead and Nevada counties have been good to Carl Bailey. In the 1934 campaign for attorney general these counties together gave Mr. Bailey a majority over Hal Norwood of 3,332 votes. Mr. Bailey won in the state by only 8,173. Hempstead and Nevada—two counties out of 75—gave Carl Bailey NEARLY HALF of his margin of victory!

In the 1936 gubernatorial campaign Hempstead and Nevada gave Mr. Bailey a margin of 1,165 votes over Ed McDonald. Mr. Bailey beat him by only 3,430 votes in the state. Again, two counties out of 75 gave Mr. Bailey OVER ONE THIRD of his majority.

I left the gate open to a people's faith—Bailey walked in, and the house burned down long since!

And this has to be written today, because as long as Carl Bailey is governor what he says and what he does represents to the world what kind of men we are. If he is a braggart, a tyrant, a trimmer, a man who would change his position every night in the year to get votes—then while you retain him as governor you are advertising to the world that private citizens of Arkansas have no more common honesty and courage than their governor has.

It was Bailey who criticized the nomination of C. E. Johnson for the State Supreme Court without a primary, which forced life-long Democrat Carroll D. Wood to run as an independent—and it was also Bailey who, the first time he had a chance to put his words into action, seized committee nomination for the United States Senate and forced John Miller to run as an independent.

Bailey's words were brave and true—his action cowardly. The State Supreme Court just a month ago ruled that his seizure of the senate nomination was entirely illegal.

It was Bailey who burned the gambling tables at Hot Springs when the Garland county machine was against him—and it was also Bailey who sat down to a love-feast the first time the Garland county men invited him.

It was Bailey who set up a civil service system for state employes, alleging he was starting an era of "no politics" with the state's payroll—and it was Bailey who started off this "no politics" era by firing everybody not politically hired by him, thus making certain that the next administration will also "clean house," and setting back the cause of civil service a decade in Arkansas.

Today Carl Bailey faces the judgment-seat. And he has a novel explanation of his record. He says the mistakes he has made have hurt himself, but not the state government.

"I'll let the record answer that. When Arkansas was faced with the humiliation of a threatened default in her road bonds the Futrell administration was swept into power by an outraged people. Prior to the Futrell administration the state's general highway obligation bonds were quoted from $35 to $40, against $100 par. On May 22, 1935, the 4 1/2% refunding bonds had risen to 84 1/2. On December 28, 1936, at the very close of the Futrell administration, the quotation was 98.

That's how things were with the state's credit when Bailey came into the governor's office. Bailey had made a trip to New York just before taking office, and the bonds went up. The governor looked like a square-shooter.

But after his own "refund" session of the legislature Governor Bailey made a second trip to New York. What he said, you and I don't know. But the same bankers who loan every other state in America (Mississippi, for instance) money at 3 and 3 1/2%, promptly went out and "dumped" Arkansas bonds bearing 4 and 5 1/2%.

On January 5 this year our 4 1/2% bonds were down to 87 1/2, rallied to 92 on July 23 last.

Conditions are vastly better now than when Futrell was in office. Arkansas has more money with which to pay. Other states' bonds are flourishing. Louisiana's went to 112. . . . But our bonds dropped nearly 14 points.

Why? We pay 6 1/2% gasoline tax—second highest in America. Isn't your conclusion the same as mine—that no matter how high your tax is, your credit will never be any good so long as the state's managing head talks and acts abroad just as he talks and acts at home?

Senate Committee to Probe Federal Politics in State

Investigator to Be Sent

KENTUCKY RAPPED

Both Federal and State
"Pressure" Proven to Probe Committee

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The senate campaign expenditures committee announced Tuesday that it would send an investigator to Arkansas in response to Representative John L. McClellan's charge that federal office holders are actively engaged in managing Senator Hattie W. Caraway's campaign for re-nomination.

Chairman Sheppard (Dem., Tex.) refused to comment further concerning the matter. There was no indication as to identity of the Arkansas investigator or when he would begin his inquiry.

Sheppard disclosed Monday that Mr. McClellan had filed a complaint with the committee but he did not release the contents of the complaint.

Mr. McClellan said he had not asked for an investigation but had "simply reported facts" in response to a questionnaire sent all senatorial candidates. He said federal departments are involved in the Arkansas Senate race and are using the power of their offices to influence votes.

Wednesday

TOKYO, Japan—(AP)—The Japanese government directed its second protest in 24 hours to Soviet Russia Wednesday in an effort to diplomatically end the bitter fighting along the Russian Siberia and Japanese Manchoukuo frontier.

Fighting still was in progress early Wednesday between large forces of well-equipped troops, with airplanes and tanks; and it was felt in authoritative circles that the exchange of gunfire marked the first round of the Far East's second unofficial war.

A later communique said the battle ended at 10 a. m. and that the Russian troops retreated some 1,500 yards from the Japanese positions.

A communique issued by Tass, Russian official news agency, denied that Soviet troops had taken the offensive in Tuesday's battle as the Japanese announced. Tass also denied that Russian planes had flown over Manchoukuo-Korean territory.

Pendergast Rolls Up Vote
in Kansas City—St. Louis

By the Associated Press

Roosevelt backers and anti-administration candidates divided Democratic honors Wednesday in four elections.

Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, foe of the court bill and other White House measures, won a landslide re-nomination.

So did Senator George McGill, of Kansas, loyal follower of the president. The same division extended to the nomination for house seats in two other states. Three West Virginia representatives who supported the president defeated their opponents, but in Virginia two avowed New Dealers lost out.

In Tuesday's Republican primaries the greatest interest was shown in the Kansas senatorial race because of campaign charges that one of the four candidates—the Rev. Gerald Winrod—was pro-Nazi. Winrod, who denied the accusation, ran third. The nomination went to former Governor Clyde Reed.

Missouri Democrats, who had taken Clark's victory for granted, were more interested in the fight for the state supreme court nomination between the forces of Governor Lloyd C. Stark and T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City party leader.

James J. Billings, endorsed by Pendergast, took an early lead because the Kansas City precincts were counted early, but Judge James M. Douglas gradually pulled ahead as the returns came in from St. Louis, his home.

Iowa Challenges the Labor Board

Board Threatens to Invoke
Federal Authority
Against Governor

DES MOINES, Iowa—(AP)—Governor R. Wilson G. Karschel Wednesday carried his constitutional law battle to the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) with a statement that the federal government "Poses only that authority which has been delegated to it by the states."

In defiance of the governor's order closing a board hearing into the Maytag Washing Machine company strike, the NLRB in Washington order the inquiry resumed here Thursday.

Federal-State Clash

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A historic test of federal versus state power appeared in prospect Tuesday night when the National Labor Board, defying Gov. Nelson G. Karschel of Iowa, decided to resume the Maytag strike hearing which he has prohibited.

Branding "illegal" the governor's action in using martial law to halt the inquiry at Newton, Ia., last week, the board instructed its trial examiner, Madison Hill, to resume the taking of testimony at the federal courthouse at Des Moines.

With 25 National Guardsmen already on duty in his strike area, the governor sent his commander, Maj. Gen. Mathew A. Tinley, to tell Hill last Saturday night that no further hearings would be permitted because they had proved a "disturbing" factor and might be delaying settlement of the three-month-old controversy.

The formal order served on Hill contained a phrase defining the territory to which it applied as the whole state of Iowa.

"We cannot believe that this phrase will be used to obstruct hearings beyond the territory in which martial law has been declared," the labor board said Tuesday. "Since the governor's purpose is to maintain the peace, the board feels that the order must be interpreted with this in view and that a hearing to be held in Des Moines at the seat of the state government and the headquarters of the governor himself, cannot be considered as forbidden by the real intent of the governor's order."

"It hopes that the governor will recognize the desire of the board to meet a different situation in a conciliatory spirit."

The board served blunt notice that should the governor hold that his order must be construed as state-wide in effect, it would have "no alternative, in the light of its obligations, but to proceed with the hearings under the authority of the national power which it exercises."

This was regarded by many as indicating the imminence of a showdown on the federal-state issues involved, especially because the governor has stated "there will be no labor board hearings in the military district of Iowa without our permission."

"If they (labor board officials) want to test out the principle of states' rights," he added, "here is a damned good place to do it."

City Natatorium Gets OK by Board of Public Affairs

Mayor Graves in Ft. Worth to Confer With WPA
Officials

FAIR PARK PROJECT

Federal Government to Furnish $10,000—City
to Pay $7,000

Mayor Albert Graves reported to the city council Tuesday night that the Board of Public Affairs had approved the proposed construction of a $17,000 municipal-owned and controlled swimming pool as a Fair Park project.

The Board of Public Affairs is composed of Mayor Graves, Roy Anderson and Lloyd Spencer. The board passes on all expenditure of more than $300.

To Ask U. S. Aid

The next possible step will be the obtaining of approval of a FWA grant. The government's share would be approximately $10,000 with the city to provide the balance—or about $7,000.

Final approval of the project rests with the city council—which has not voted on the project. If the city can obtain the FWA grant of possibly $10,000, then the matter would come before the council for final approval or rejection.

Mayor Graves was in Fort Worth Wednesday conferring with FWA officials in regard to the proposed swimming pool.

Asks Tax Reduction

R. V. McGinnis, owner of the New theatre, appeared before the council, and asked a reduction in theater license fees. The council then passed a motion referring the matter to the ordinance committee. The present theater license fee is $75 per year, which is paid quarterly.

Terrell Cornelius appeared before the council and asked that additional water and sewer lines be extended to the Cornelius Heights addition.

Mayor Graves appointed Aldermen Kenneth G. Hamilton, Carter Johnson and C. E. Cassidy as a committee to investigate the matter and report back to the council at its next meeting.

Acting Chief of Police filed his report for July which showed 25 arrests; fines assessed $210; cash collected from fines $139; cases dismissed none; cases appealed none; prisoners assigned to streets two.

To Continue Clinic

The council voted an appropriation of $5 a day to be paid to an assistant to continue the operation of venereal clinic for negroes of Hope. The clinic is under the supervision of Dr. C. M. Lewis, negro physician, who is paid $25 per month. The clinic will be operated another two months.

Small Turkey to Mean Less Hash

New Breed Runs 10 to 12
Pounds, More Convenient Size

BELTSVILLE, Md.—(AP)—Experiments designed to end the Christmas turkey hash season on December 26 instead of January 1 are nearing completion at the Department of Agriculture's experiment station.

The reason the hash season lasts so long is that the average turkey at the prime age of 28 weeks weighs 18 to 20 pounds. This is too much for the average family to consume at one meal, even if the in-laws are included. So the left-overs hang on through a monotonous week of turkey hash, turkey croquettes, turkey à la king and turkey soup.

The department set out to change all this by producing a streamlined turkey. About 10 to 12 pounds, it was figured, was the right size to grow a turkey for a Christmas dinner.

They experimented with bronze and white and all the other domestic varieties. They added a dash of white Austrian, imported especially from Scotland. They found that they needed a final something to make the birds the right size. They got that final touch by blending in the old-fashioned wild turkey.

Now they have a bird that weighs 12 pounds at the prime age, 28 weeks. It has a large breast, with at least two extra slices of white meat.

The final stage of the experiment is to breed the new strains for several generations and make sure that the extra white meat and the streamlined size stay put.

Deadline Set for Softball Entries

August 20 Last Day to Enter Teams in District Tournament

The deadline for entering teams in the district softball tournament to be held in Hope the latter part of August has been set for 12 o'clock noon, August 20, according to an announcement Wednesday by Earl W. Eason, district softball commissioner.

The tournament will be played on August 23, 24 and 25.

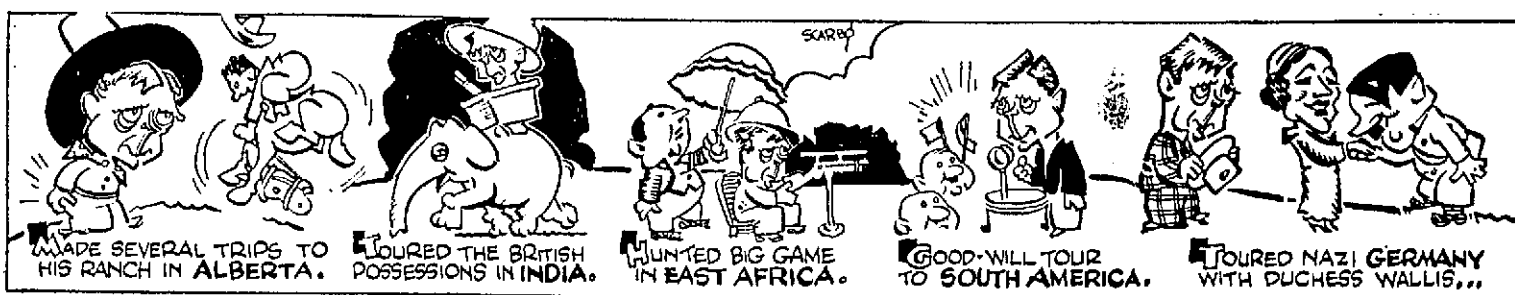

The tournament brackets will be drawn the afternoon of August 20 and will be mailed to the entries, enabling them to know within 48 hours in advance which team they meet.

Because of the large number of teams expected to enter and the limited time allowed for the tournament it was decided that the tournament is to be on the single elimination basis. Any team in the eleven counties comprising this district will be eligible to compete upon payment of the $5 entry fee. This fee makes each team a member of the Amateur Softball Association of America and assures all players that they will be competing against amateurs.

Counties in this district are Hempstead, Perry, Pike, Hot Spring, Little Rock, and a portion of the tournament will be paid from the tournament receipts, if they go to Little Rock. Each team will be limited to 16 players.

Ex-Empire Salesman Edward Windsor Still Loves Travel

By NEA Service

Edward, Duke of Windsor, traveled so extensively in connection with his former trade of Crown Prince that it's in his blood. He can no more sit down in a quiet villa at Antibes than an old fire-horse can go on munching oats when the alarm bell rings.

Minus his kingdom and facing a future of traveling—anywhere except in England—Edward is Exhibit A among the remaining wanderers whose globe-trotting has been highlighted as a result of the recent married difficulties of Barbara Hutton and her Danish nobleman husband, themselves travelers of sorts.

Brought up as heir to the throne of the mightiest empire of the world, Edward started out with a stiff course on "What's Where in the British Empire."

Right after the World War, he began his travels as "first salesman of the British Empire." Canada and eastern United States saw him then, and in 1924 and 1927 he again toured westward to his Alberta ranch.

In 1920 he did Australia and New Zealand by way of the Panama Canal, and the following year he toured India, Japan, and the East Indies. In 1925 he did South Africa and then Argentina and South America.

By 1928 he was big-game hunting in East Africa when he was forced to rush home (6,000 miles) because his father, King George V, became ill. In 1930 he returned to Africa to finish the hunting.

The good-will tour of South America, intended to promote British trade in that area, came in 1931 when he opened the British Industrial Exposition at Buenos Aires. That was his last journey of word scope.

But in 1935 he visited Austria and Hungary, and took the famous "yacht"ing vacation—"on which Mrs. Wallis Simpson was also a guest. This little voyage was to the Dalmatian coast and the southern Mediterranean. On June 3, 1937, Edward and Wallis were married as Duke and Duchess of Windsor. Fortunately she is also an internationalist, and as fond of, though not as experienced in travel as the duke himself.

The honeymoon was spent in Venice and the Austrian castle of Wassercloenberg. Only a few months after "settling down" in France, however, they were off for a tour of Germany (the one that led rumors that the duke was more than ordinarily interested in Fascism).

That same restless urge to be on the move, complicated by an apparently genuine desire to be of use, led to the plan to tour the United States which was frustrated by opposition to the sponsorship of Charles Bedaux, the efficiency expert, and by other causes.

Paris, Versailles, Cannes, Antibes see the Windsors frequently, and there seems no doubt at all that the first opportunity will witness travels much broadened out from the narrow beach cramped by Europe's most prominent restless romancers since their marriage.

When one has roved the wide world as future master of a great part of it, the train ride from Paris to Antibes just won't do.

Elaborately Fitted and Bare-Handed Americans

HERE is something almighty funny about the Typical American. It is pointed up by the recent sensational flights of Howard Hughes and Douglas Corrigan.

Start with Hughes.

Hughes is a typical American. He is thorough, a genius for preparation and organization, using the best equipment money can buy, supplementing all of the newest scientific gadgets with a crew of skilled technicians, any one of whom would be a star if he operated on his own hook.

All those things are typical of America. That's the American way of doing things—as witness, for instance, the success of the existing commercial air line over the Pacific ocean. Have plenty of money for whatever you undertake, buy the best there is, lean heavily on science and machinery, put things into the hands of the most skilled operators you can find, prepare in every conceivable way—and then let her rip.

So far, so good.

BUT Corrigan is also a typical American. He is a lone wolf sort of a chap, with a flair for relying on himself to the exclusion of everything and everybody else. He doesn't care very much—apparently—for the latest things in gadgets, and all he asks of his machinery is that it will run if treated properly. Elaborate plans have no place in his ideology. He can substitute a genius for doing the right thing at the right time, a healthy spot of self-reliance and a bit of good luck, for the expensive scientific equipment his fellows rely on—and when he does he can make out pretty well for himself.

All of which, when you stop to think about it, is quite typical of America. It stems, perhaps, from the old inventive Yankee tradition, or from the day of the frontier; in any case in its own way it is just as "typical" as is the Howard Hughes way of doing things.

THIS adds up to a paradox. Which are we, really the Hughes type or the Corrigan type?

The answer is: Both. We are the land of Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison, and also the land of Daniel Boone and Kit Carson. We are the greatest gadget-users on earth, and we are also a great people to get along without gadgets and go sailing through on sheer human ability.

Which makes, when you stop to think about it, quite a combination. It may be a little bit puzzling to strangers, once in a while; but in the long run it's the sort of combination of abilities that ought to be pretty effective.

The Scenery Prospects

ONE of the best services a newspaper can render its readers in such parlous times as these is to keep calling attention to such things as are worth looking forward to, as they swim into human ken.

And so, gentlemen, your attention is directed today to the feminine figure. Word comes from an unimpeachable source that the outlook for the fall is the best in many seasons.

You may not know it, but the shape a lady's in around Thanksgiving has been foreordained at least as early as the 4th of July. And you may not know this, but "Fall Corset Week" has just been observed in New York Buyers for department stores were given a preview of the Fall, 1938 Woman, and this is what they discovered:

The trend to the youthful, but far from boyish figure is more than holding its own. For instance, things will definitely veer in here, and out there, but not too much. Nothing abrupt, but at the same time nothing overly subtle. Improved structural engineering techniques have entered what the trade calls the larger group. And the larger group is expected to do a good deal of buying this season.

Things, gentlemen, seem to be shaping around ok.

Neglect of Smallpox Prevention May Lead to Future Epidemics

Investigations made among students coming into one of the larger universities in the United States indicated that only about one-fourth had had a fairly recent vaccination against smallpox.

Among physicians generally the impression is prevalent that people are not availing themselves of this protective device of modern medicine as they should avail themselves, if smallpox is to be kept in the realm of controllable diseases.

Since men have lost their fear of smallpox they have become inclined to neglect protective measures, with the likelihood that smallpox may yet reappear as a virulent disease, affecting large numbers of people, and reaping a toll of thousands of deaths before modern preventive medicine can again bring it under control.

The history of smallpox goes back deeply into antiquity. There seems to be evidence that it occurred as far back as the 12th century B. C.

Certainly it was present among the ancient Greeks and Romans, and there were epidemics in France and Italy in the 6th century. The available records indicate that smallpox reached America in 1520, when a negro slave with the disease came into Mexico with the troops of Cortez. The epidemic thus created destroyed the lives of more than three and a half million people.

The records in Massachusetts indicate that the disease first appeared in that state in 1633, and was prevalent in Boston in 1649.

Now today, as the result of the widespread use of vaccination against smallpox, few people ever see a case, and the human being who goes about with the scars of smallpox on his face is considered to be a monument to his own neglect of proper measures for health.

Every child should be vaccinated as a baby, and again when it enters school in the sixth year.

Whenever the disease appears as an outbreak in any community, everyone should be vaccinated at once if he has not had a successful vaccination within three or four years. Everyone exposed in any manner to smallpox should certainly be vaccinated.

Any failure of mankind in the mass to avail themselves of this well-established measure will lead unquestionably to an increasing incidence of this disease throughout the United States as indeed there has already been an increasing incidence in a few places.

Members of the police force of Cleveland, Ohio, are putting pamphlets in unlocked cars. The pamphlets stress the increase of juvenile crime and give as the most important factor, the increase of unlocked cars.

"Brother, You're Super-Colossal!"

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Baby's Hand to Mouth Life Leads to Thumb Sucking.

Poor physical habits worry mothers more than unfortunate behavior. From thumb-sucking there are a dozen variations of the "hand" habit.

Hand-to-mouth is a natural gesture. The tiny baby manages one day to get his hand close to his mouth. And in pops a lovely pink finger or thumb. What joy! And, oh, how he smacks his lips and goes after it, although he would, of course, bite on anything handy. Mother nature equipped him with one talent when he arrived to stay: she has given him extra strong muscles in his cheeks and mouth that never seem to tire.

He greatly prefers food, of course, but he is ever ready to go through the motions of eating when there is no food near. It seems to comfort him between meals, by association of ideas. It is a pleasurable act to work the cheeks and jaw even when food is absent.

The baby loves his hands. He is probably most proud of his little hands. He tries to use them long before he knows what they are for. No one can teach him the use of his digits. He must learn alone. He begins with his mouth.

The child learns in time to handle a spoon. Hand to mouth again, it is, and again this is associated with the pleasure of eating. It seems, then, that everything nice contributes to his habit, while nothing pleasant can be done to break it up. This is why it is hard to do much about thumb or finger-sucking. Of course, it does help in some cases to use mittens or patent guards, and bitter, but harmless, flavors applied to offending members have also been moderately successful.

To provide enough playthings for the young child to divert attention is a help in its way; also to keep him very busy and interested. These are panaceas in general for any poor habit.

Nikki Jerome, heroine, blond, nondescript, engaged to six-foot, black-haired SUPER MALLORY, hero, who is accompanying her on a trip to Nikki's aunt and uncle on a Wyoming dude ranch. Nikki's father, Mr. Jerome, is a wealthy New York Jew merchant.

Yesterday, returning to the clearing, Steve and Nikki are held up by Sarto. He puts his pistol to Nikki's head and says, "I don't mess with this," he warns.

CHAPTER XII

AS Nikki and Steve moved over into the center of the clearing under the waving directions of the black automatic in Sarto's hand, they heard a rifle shot in the distance. It was followed by a second and a third and the sounds dotted a semicircle in the direction Steve and Nikki and Woody had taken when they left camp the day before.

Three shots, thought Steve, meant Uncle Jim, Rance and Woody were searching separately. Fiske probably was with one of them. He wouldn't be alone. One shot meant, of course, they hadn't found anything. They couldn't very well when the persons they hunted were safely back in camp. Well, they were back in camp anyway, thought Steve, if not too safe.

He glanced at Sarto. The man was backing toward the cabin against which a rifle stood.

Of course, thought Steve, he'll complete the signal system. He watched Sarto jab the pistol into his hip pocket and stoop for the rifle and for a moment thought of making a break. If he made the trees he could at least warn the others. Then he as quickly discarded the idea. Nikki would be left alone with the gunman.

Sarto's thoughts had gone along the same line.

"Don't try it," he said with an evil grin. "I'll get one of you and it might be the girl."

He picked up the rifle and fired, not once but twice in the air.

That will bring the others back, thought Steve, startled. If one shot meant no luck, certainly two shots would mean he and Nikki had been found. Before he had time to go further along that mental tangent, Sarto spoke.

"You two sit over by that tree. Face toward the fire and don't try anything. It wouldn't be healthy. When the others come in," he waved a casual arm in the direction from whence the shots had come, "don't try to give 'em any signs. I'll do the talking."

THEY sat down, their backs to the tree, facing the clearing and the cabin at their right. Sarto placed the rifle on the bench by the cabin and sat down also, the pistol held carelessly in his two hands.

"What's he going to do," whispered Nikki.

"Ambush the others when they come in I suppose," Steve whispered back. And then as he found the answer:

"He'll need someone to guide him back to the ranch."

They sat quietly for several minutes. Nikki shifted uncomfortably. After Sarto had ambushed the others, then what? He had murdered Bancroft. A man who had killed once probably wouldn't worry very much about repeating the crime. She remembered, suddenly, the day they had walked through Grand Central, she and Steve and her father. No hint of tragedy in the bright sunshine of that day, no warning of the things ahead. Then the money on the train and the realization that her father was somehow involved with the sinister Bancroft and his companion. She looked at the hunched figure on the bench. No, no. Her father couldn't be to blame for all this. He just couldn't. But Bancroft's reference to the "Jerome affair" kept coming back.

"Hungry?" asked Steve, with a quick glance at the gunman.

"I guess so," said Nikki. "I hadn't thought about it."

"Sarto," called Steve, "We haven't eaten much lately. Couldn't we have a little food while we're waiting?"

"Shut up," said Sarto. "You'll get something to eat later—maybe."

"Isn't there some way we can warn the others?" whispered Nikki.

"I've been trying to think of a way," answered Steve. "But it's too dangerous now. Wait until the others get here."

"Cut out the chatter," said Sarto roughly. "Can it—all of it, see."

A MOMENT later they heard a halloo. Sarto came to abrupt attention. He slipped the rifle behind the bench where it would be out of sight but within easy reach. The automatic he held between his knees.

"Give 'em a call," he ordered Nikki. "Just one and don't try anything or—"

"Hello," called Nikki, but her voice wasn't very strong.

They could hear the crackle of the brush and the sound of footsteps now. A bird fluttered up in frightened haste. A second later Rance burst into the clearing.

"Nikki," he cried. "Thank God you're safe." He started toward the couple sitting by the tree. "What's the matter? Hurt? What's wrong?"

"Drop the rifle," it was Sarto. He was standing by the bench and the pistol in his hand covered all three.

"Nobody's hurt yet," he said. "Drop the rifle." Rance let it slide slowly from his hands. Sarto walked over and ran his left hand across Rance, removing the hunting knife at his belt.

"Now walk over and sit by them. And don't you start anything either. I'll run this little show." He picked up the rifle and dropped it behind the bench with the knife. Rance sat on the other side of Nikki, his face a bewildered puzzle.

"Just sit," said Sarto. "Don't talk."

They sat there in a tight-fisted little semicircle, waiting for the next returning searcher. Nikki breathed a little prayer as another call was heard. Please let Uncle Jim be careful.

"Answer it," commanded Sarto and she called out another "hello."

A MOMENT later her uncle came puffing up the trail to the camp, his stocky form pushing through the brush impatiently, perspiration rolling from his forehead. He hurried into the clearing.

"I knew you two'd turn up safe and sound," he shouted, his ruddy face lighting up. Then he stopped short as he saw them all three seated silently by the tree.

"What in thunder—" Nikki's hands clenched.

"Shut up," said Sarto. "Drop the gun." Uncle Jim let the rifle slip to the ground as he turned slowly to face Sarto and took in the stubby, black gun.

"Mister," he drawled. "You seem to be the boss right now. But I don't think I'll last."

"Get over by the tree and sit down," said Sarto. "And shut up."

"Where's Bancroft?" asked Uncle Jim, disregarding the last command.

"Dead," said Steve laconically. Sarto's upper lip curled until his front teeth were showing whitely through. "You know too much." Steve thought for a moment he was going to shoot. Then the lip came down.

"Yeah, he's dead. And that ain't the half of it, either. So will you be all of you, if you try to stop me from getting out of here." He jabbed the pistol in Uncle Jim's direction.

"Where's Fiske and that runty cow herder?" he demanded.

"They're comin'!"

"Well, watch yourself when they get here. If anyone makes a move I'll start shooting and I'll shoot in this direction." He gestured toward Nikki. He added Uncle Jim's rifle to his collection behind the bench, just as the crackle of brush heralded the approach of the last two searchers. Rance stirred uneasily.

I have found that in most cases, children forsake their fingers when life begins to get personally exciting. This means any time between two and four years of age. Bed time and nap time may still find the comforting thumb in its place, however, no matter how busy or forgetful its small owner at other hours.

Dentists are divided in their verdicts about the effect of constant sucking on mouth and teeth, but it is an unattractive performance regardless of results. It really should be discouraged. I would not shame a child, but use intelligent resourcefulness as far as it will go. If the habit continues into school years, it is unusual. In such a case I advise consulting a doctor.

Important Announcement

Certain anonymously written and distributed circulars containing defamatory remarks concerning my opponent have appeared in this district. This was done without the knowledge or consent of me or my friends. I regret very much that this sort of thing has occurred because I have always had the highest regard for my opponent and will continue to conduct my campaign upon a high plane.

Suppose We Face The Facts

Four years ago we had two open saloons on Highway 24—Mine Creek Township. They were there 6 years ago and 8 years ago.

Reginald Bearden has relieved us of this bad situation. We have less crime in Mine Creek Township today than ever before, and we give credit because of the service that he has rendered.

We owe it to him, and we ask the people of Hempstead County to join us in electing him so that law and order may prevail.

A Prayer For Dogs

Good Master, bless each dog that no one owns,
That has no flower bed to bury bones,
No loving hands to scratch his ears and ruff,
No gate to guard, and never quite enough
To eat. Ye saints, guard well each cringing pup
That sits with tail turned down instead of up.
Good Master, pity pampered city dogs
That sleep indoors all day like snoring logs,
That never feel the sun nor watch the rain—
Except behind the curtained window pane;
That grow to wheeze and cough from too much fat,
And never in their lives have chased a cat.
All other dogs, beloved and gay and free,
Are blest enough—they need not trouble thee.

Gifford Byers and Frank Hill, who also were received nicely.

John P. Vesey was the first of the entrants in the representative's race to speak. In a review of his records in the last General Assembly and in the special session, Mr. Vesey received much applause for his "dry" stand on the liquor question.

George D. Brown

George D. Brown in making his speech for the same office, said in part, "I have no big lot of promises to make to you people. . . I don't know what I can do when I get up there, if you people are good enough to send me. But, I can promise you one thing, Old George Brown will be in there fighting for the people he represents. I promise you that I will get in there and do my best for you. When a man does that no one can do better. I've been working for a living since I was eight years old. I've done a little bit of every kind of work from farming on the halves to working in a gin and selling insurance. . . I know what it is to fight for what I got. . . I can fight for you on the floor of the legislature. I'll have a vote up there and I promise you that it will be for the people's interests. If you see fit on August 9 I will appreciate anything you can do for me."

In the few short minutes left before the non recess, Dick Huie, candidate for prosecuting attorney of the Eighth judicial district, made a brief announcement concerning his candidacy. Immediately after luncheon, Jim Bearden said a few words of thanks to the assembly for the co-operation given him during his two terms as sheriff of Hempstead county.

Royce Weisenberger, first of the five representative candidates to speak after dinner, added a new plank to his platform. He charged that under the present provisions of the teacher retirement act that a participant who withdrew from the profession before the time stipulated in the act lost all money paid into the retirement fund. He stated that he favored change in the act so that the teacher would lose nothing.

A. P. Delony, Talbot Field, Jr., Hugh D. Clark and J. A. Sullivan next spoke in the order named, to finish the representative bracket.

John W. Griffin was the first sheriff candidate to speak. He said, "I elected on August 9 I will enforce all the laws. Everyone will be treated just alike."

Reginald Bearden stressed the fact that he wanted a young man's chance and emphasized his motto, "Law and order for all alike."

Clarence Baker stated that he has had "more experience as a peace officer in Hempstead county than any other man."

Lester Booker, candidate for state land commissioner was represented by his brother, Joe, who received much applause after making a short talk.

Carrigan for Cook
Steve Carrigan was next to face the microphone. He appeared in behalf of "Bob" Cook, who is a candidate for governor. Mr. Carrigan extolled the virtues and stressed the economic administration of Mr. Cook when the latter was judge of Putaski county. He stated that it was Bailey's friends and auto testing machines. He also charged the present governor with being unsympathetic to the taxpayers, of not keeping his word, and threatening the voters of the state with disfranchisement if they voted again Governor

Ballley in the recent United States senatorial election.
E. F. McFaddin next took the stand in the interest of Governor Bailey. He stated that by measures pushed by the Bailey administration the expenses of the county general fund had been greatly alleviated. He also claimed that the per capita school allotment was raised to its present high of $6.60 by Bailey. Mr. McFaddin next attacked Cook for purchasing asphalt for county roads in Louisiana at a higher rate than he would have had to pay in Arkansas.

Mr. Carrigan in a brief rejoinder explained that the Louisiana product was cheaper in view of the quality obtained.
McClaskill will greet the candidates Wednesday. Thursday's stop will be at DeAnn and at Piney Grove on Friday.

Boss Pendergast

eratic renomination by a decisive margin. Returns from 704 of the state's 4,428 precincts gave him 61,262 votes against a combined total of 20,621 for his three opponents.

In the state Supreme Court race, a veritable civil war between T. J. (Boss) Pendergast and Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, returns indicated an edge for the governor's candidate, Judge James M. Douglas. With Kansas City, Pendergast's stronghold, more than half in, James V. Billings, whom he had supported, led Douglas. Returns from 1,250 of the state's precincts gave:
Billings 120,301
Douglas 79,606

These, however, included only two precincts in St. Louis, Douglas' home city, which gave him 346 votes to three for Billings.

Douglas led in 85 of the state's 114 counties.
Many Republicans Vote
The Democratic Supreme Court battle which pushed Clark's race into the background, attracted thousands of Republicans. Reports of light Republican voting everywhere indicated a state-wide Republican invasion of the Democrats' civil war. There were pronounced demands for Democratic ballots in Kansas City's South Side, where the Republicans are strongest, and in normally Republican wards in St. Louis.

"Boss" Pendergast backed Billings with the full strength of his Kansas City organization, which helped make an obscure judge, Guy B. Park, governor in 1932 and helped elect another, Harry S. Truman, as United States senator in 1934. Stark was chosen governor with Pendergast's assistance two years ago.

Stark marshalled his army of state employees and the vote-getting ability of Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann's St. Louis administration. Political observers also believed the heavy Republican vote went into the Douglas column.

Both Factions Back Clark
Clark's candidacy was the one place where the warring factions found common ground. The senator's supporters hoped for an overwhelming vote to enhance Clark's stature as presidential material in 1940.

Winrod Poor Third
TOPEKA, Kan.—(AP)—The Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, target of disputed charges of Nazi sympathies, ran far behind the leaders early Tuesday night in Kansas' Republican senatorial primary while former Gov. Clyde M. Reed and Dallas Knapp, a lawyer, waged a close race for first place.

Payne H. Ratner, state senator from Parsons, was in front for the Republican gubernatorial nomination with Harold McGugin, former congressman, second.

Complete returns from 128 precincts out of 2,780 gave:
Reed 5,553
Knapp 3,447
Winrod 2,917
Fisher 1,413
For governor the 128 complete precincts gave:
Winrod 2,917
Ratner 6,492
McGugin 3,800
Thompson 2,397
Newcomer 1,619

The Republican senatorial nominee will oppose Senator George McGill, Democrat, in November. McGill had one primary opponent, Joe Downer, Peabody farmer, but he was running far in front.

Both Reed and Knapp were critical of Roosevelt administration policies throughout their campaigns. McGill was rated a New Deal supporter.

Democratic race—Alben Barkley, the majority leader of the Senate, and A. B. Chandler, governor of Kentucky.

Without mentioning names, the senate group said: "It is certain that organized efforts have been and are being made to control the vote of those on relief work, and that contributions have been sought and obtained from federal employees, in behalf of one of the senatorial candidates."

On the other hand, the committee reported, "It is equally certain that state officials charged in part with the distribution of federal funds for old age assistance and for unemployment compensation have been required to contribute from their salaries and of their services in the interest of another candidate for the United States Senate."

Before issuing its statement the committee heard a report from H. Ralph Burton, its Kentucky investigator. Terming the situation "deplorable," the committee said the facts it had found in Kentucky "should arouse the conscience of the country."

Hopkins Makes Reply
WPA Administrator Hopkins issued a statement in which he said he was "informed" that the committee's criticism was "not directed at any one connected with WPA but at persons entirely outside of the WPA who sought to get relief workers to vote for one candidate or the other."

Chairman Sheppard (Dem. Tex.) said the committee's remarks were not directed at Hopkins or any other Washington officials of WPA but "may or may not include WPA officials in Kentucky."

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Is an attendant at a daytime home wedding supposed to wear a hat?

2. Is it correct to use initials in place of full names on wedding invitations?

3. If the bride has no middle name, should the groom's middle name be omitted on the invitations so that the lines are more nearly the same length?

4. Who is invited to a wedding rehearsal dinner or supper?

5. Is it the bride or groom who makes arrangements with the minister?

What would you do if—
You are the parents of a bride-to-be. You live in a small apartment and cannot afford to pay for a reception in a hotel. The groom's parents live in a large house with ample facilities for entertaining.

(a) Let groom's parents give a reception in their home following a church wedding?

(b) Have a small home or church wedding without reception and let groom's parents give a reception after honeymoon?

(c) Limit number of guests so that they can be accommodated in your apartment?

Answers

1. Yes.

2. No.

3. No.

4. Just the bridal party and perhaps a few members of the both families.

5. The bride—although the groom pays him.

Weed Pest

Hempstead county farmers who have an acreage of lespedeza should be on the lookout for dodder, also known as lovevine, which is one of the serious weed pests in lespedeza, warns Clifford L. Smith, county agent.

Dodder, or lovevine, is a yellowish-orange vine, whose runners form a mat over the lespedeza. Due to its heavy seedling ability, dodder may entirely cover a lespedeza meadow within a few years after one plant has gotten a start, according to information received from Charles F. Simmons, extension agronomist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

In parts of southeastern United States, dodder is so common that lespedeza fields often appear solid yellow at this season of the year. Single vines in lespedeza fields in Arkansas if not eradicated now, Mr. Simmons pointed out, may cause a similar seriousness in this state.

To get rid of dodder, Mr. Simmons said, the plant should be cut off close to the ground, entirely removed from the field, and burned. Short pieces of the vine may start new growth if dropped in the ground. Another recommended method of controlling dodder is to pile straw on the dodder and set fire to it. Instead of straw, coal or engine oil may be poured on the vine, and the burned.

Dodder may be destroyed before seed matures, any delay in destroying a small area will result in serious spread of the pest.

Relief Hurlers More Important Than Starters

Johnny Murphy

Third of a five-part series, "Changing Baseball."

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NE A Service

In any comparison of modern pitching stars with the giants of the past, a comparison, say, of Carl Hubbell and Johnny Allen with Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson, take into consideration the part the much knuckled-about rabbit ball plays in the interesting situation.

If the claims of a Johnny Allen that, hurling with the old-fashioned sphere, he would rate with the masters of all time, are not ludicrous, what is the basis for his contention?

Plenty, says any present-day star pitcher.

The old-timer, pitching with a ball that would remain in play despite a scuffing and battering that would make any umpire nowadays throw it out of play without a second glance, had every advantage. He could cleave, or doctor, such a ball to his heart's content. He would use a ball no matter how much scrapping it got. A ball that hit the top of the field was just his dish. He would calmly wait for the apple and then apply all the artful dodges the old-timers knew to make it do tricks.

All That Is Different Now. But styles in baseball, as in women's lingerie, change. Umpires pull fresh baseballs out of their pockets as fast as a magician doing a card trick. Shiny balls are passed out to the pitchers as freely as passes to a roller derby. A ball club could buy a pretty fair country ball player for the amount of money it pays for baseballs in excess of the cost, 20 years ago.

Games are now started with 36 balls, and the plate arbiter usually sends for more. Each major league club's ball bill now is about $15,000 annually. In the old days it was negligible. Pitchers no longer wait for the much-desired foul to roll off the roof, then to be put in play. They can't. A new ball is dish out to them before they can regain their normal stance. Any ball that is hard his is discarded by the umpire without a second's hesitation. Any sort of mild beef by a batter, or request to inspect the ball, will hold up the game and likely result in a change of ammunition.

Why Pitchers Don't Last. Thus handicapped—or at least your big-time pitchers claims he is handicapped—it is no wonder that a constant decreasing number of flingers are able to last the nine-inning route. In this present streamlined age of baseball, the pitcher is at the mercy of the blacksmith-armed athlete at the plate who is swinging for the wall. Never before has relief pitching been at such a premium. The success of Pittsburgh's Mace Brown, New York Yankees' Johnny Murphy and Cleveland's Johnny Humphries recalls the great relief triumphs of Wiley Moore, who pitched the Yankees to a pennant in 1927, and Fred Marberry, whom Buckey Harris, Washington manager, calls the most vital player he has ever had.

With the best of present-day pitchers unable to last more than six or seven innings, it is essential to any permanent contender to have a relief corps that is both extensive and effective.

Yellow Baseball Is Given A Trial

Dodgers and Cardinals Use Ball in Regular League Game

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—(AP)—The yellow ball may have its advantages against a white-shirted background, but otherwise the ball is neither better nor worse than the conventional sphere. That was the opinion of the Dodgers after they had beaten the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 2, Tuesday in the yellow ball's first big league test.

"I could follow it well enough from the bench," said Manager Burleigh Grimes. "I was a little surprised sometimes at the distance some of these flies went, because they didn't sound well hit. Particularly the ball Koy hit that bounced against the wall in left field."

Cutfielder Tuck Stainback of the Dodgers said he noticed the dye came off the ball and onto the bat after it was hit.

Fred Fitzsimmons, who pitched the complete game, found that the dye came off on his perspiring fingers. "It made it a little harder to grip the ball," he said.

Was a Slight Shock. Stanton Y. Sutin gives the gist of the Louis-Schmeling fight broadcast as heard in Prague via short wave radio from a German announcer at the ring-side in Yankee Stadium. It went something like this:

"Max Schmeling is coming into the ring. The crowd is shouting for joy. He smiles back. He is serious and calm. Here comes Joe Louis. His reception is notably cooler, far less loud and cordial. Hal! Hal! The conceited Neger! He wears a shrill-colored sleeping suit and over that a blue silk dressing gown. Probably because he knows he will soon be lulled to sleep."

"The gong!" "Louis immediately attacks, strikes hard, fast. He hits twice. Schmeling draws back cautiously. Louis attacks again. He is amazingly strong. But close up, ha! ha! Max overcomes him. Louis is somewhat better. Schmeling still fumbles. But give him time . . . good! . . . now!"

Through a tremendous roar one hears the weeping announced: "Schmeling holds fast to the ropes. Schmeling gives in the knees. . . . Maxie goes to the floor! . . . Maxie! Maxie! For God's sake, what! Schmeling is up again. He stands—Maxxxxie The Neger knocks him down again . . . the towel flies in the ring!"

Powell Is Signed To Battle Cates

Palmas Pounder to Take on Stamps Athlete in Main Event

Milt and Mutt Powell, twin brothers from Palmas, have been signed to appear in a double main event on Friday night's fight card at the Athletic Arena on South Main street.

In two appearances at the arena this season Milt Powell has scored knockouts over Lloyd Quillen of Spring Hill. With two easy victories under his belt Milt goes up against a boy on this week's program who is expected to stay the limit with him.

Norman Cates, 170 pound fighter of Stamps, will meet the Palmas slugger in one half of the double main event. Cates has just completed a three year enlistment in the U. S. Army at Fort Sill, Okla. Last year he won the lightweight championship in an open tournament conducted at the Post.

In the second half of the twin bill Mutt Powell takes on Wilton Gentry of the CCC Camp. In his initial appearance at the arena last Friday night Mutt won a decision over Chas. Ray Baker. Two weeks ago Gentry dropped a close decision to Chubby Anderson of Spring Hill but since that time has been training regularly and has asked for the opportunity to fight here again. The bout will be three rounds.

The three round semi-final bout features Fred Bohanan of the CCC Camp and Dolma Pipkin of Stamps. Bohanan has fought in the local ring twice this season. His first fight here resulted in a draw with Red Simpson. In a return bout the next week Bohanan knocked out Simpson in the second round of a scheduled three round bout.

This will be Pipkin's first appearance here. Leo Dunlap, the 6 foot, 4 inch, 197 pound Hope negro heavyweight who won a decision over Edmond Davis last week, meets Le Roy Daniels, big 195 pound Fulton battler, in the three round feature preliminary.

The remainder of the card will be announced Thursday.

Terry Suspends Pitcher Melton

New York Manager Gives No Explanation for Penalty

NEW YORK—(AP)—Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, announced after Tuesday's defeat by Chicago that Cliff Melton, left-hander whose hurling had much to do with the Giant's pennant triumph in 1937, has been suspended without pay.

Terry would give no explanation of the move except to remark it was "the club's own business."

Melton last appeared on the mound a week ago and was knocked to the showers by the Cardinals. He has had a poor season, winning nine and losing as many. Last year, as a freshman in the national League, he won 20 games and lost nine.

Yankee Rally Falls Short, Tigers Win

New York Lead Cut to Game and Half as Indians Defeat Boston

DETROIT—(AP)—George Gil, Tiger pitcher, weathered a ninth-inning rally by the New York Yankees and helped the Tigers to a 4-to-3 triumph in the opening game of their series. The defeat cut the Yankees' lead to a game and a half as the Indians beat Boston.

Gil entered the ninth with a 4-to-1 lead. The Yankees had made only five hits off him until, with one out in the ninth, Gordon singled and Frankie Crosetti hit his fifth homer into the left field stands. Red Rolfe doubled but Gil got Tommy Henrich on a roller to the box.

Lefty Gomez, Yank's starter, was hit for all the Detroit runs. The Tigers got one in the second on Pete Fox's hit and two errors. Charlie Gehringer smacked his 14th homer of the season with Billy Rogell on base for two more in the third.

Singles by Jo-Jo White and Rogell scored the other Detroit run in the fifth while the Yanks got one in the sixth on Crosetti's walk, Rolfe's double and an infield out. Murphy took over the Yanks' pitching in the seventh.

Indians Take Boston CLEVELAND—(AP)—Denny Galehouse kept 12 Boston hits well scattered and the Indians took the opener of a four-game series, 7 to 4.

Manager Joe Cronin used three pitchers in an effort to check the Tribe. Kenny Keltner hit his eighteenth home run of the season in the second inning with the bases empty.

Bruce Campbell lde the Cleveland attack with three hits, including a double. Cronin had a triple, double and single and Tabor hit two successive doubles for Boston.

Galehouse, now headed for a starting role with Johnny Allen out with a sore arm, held Boston scoreless from the third until the ninth when Cronin's double off the wall scored Crammer, who had walked.

Bryant Huris Cubs to Win Over Giants

Chicago Righthander Holds Terry Team to Two Safeties

NEW YORK—(AP)—Clay Bryant, Chicago Cubs' right-hander, stopped the Giants Tuesday with a two-hit, 7-to-0 shutout that cut the New Yorkers' lead over the third place Cubs to a game and a half. The Cubs also picked up a game on the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

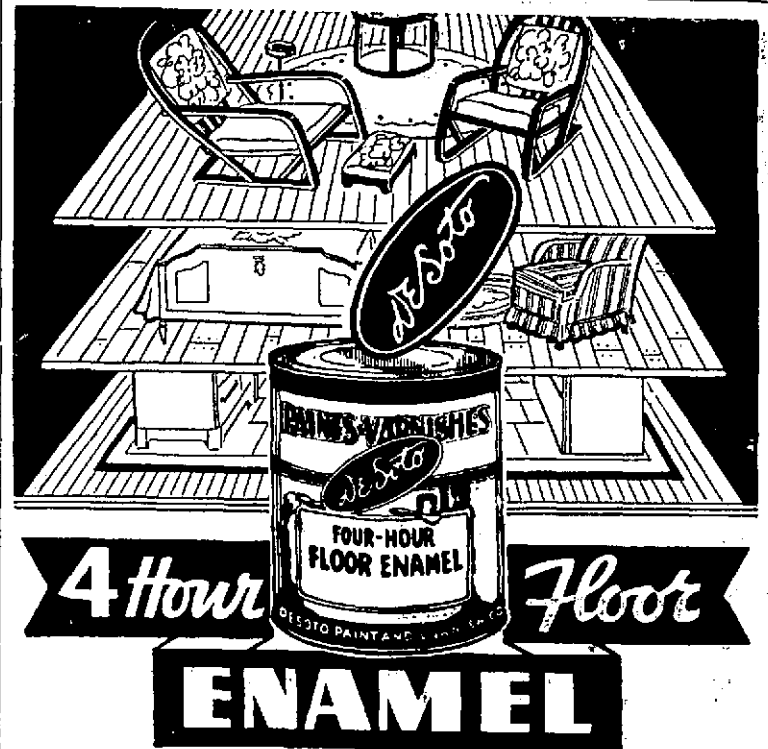

While Bryant baffled the Giants, the Cubs routed Carl Hubbell and smacked Dick Coffman, his relief, for 12 hits that included a three-run homer by Etan Hack and another round-tripper for Billy Jurgas. Hack also collected a double and a single and Bryant helped his won cause with two singles.

Bryant held the Giants hitless until the sixth when Hubbell got a single. An inning later Mel Ott doubled for the New Yorkers' second hit. The Cubs got to Hubbell in the fourth for two runs, scored another on Jurgas' homer in the fifth and then routed Carl with a four-run attack in the seventh which included Hack's homer and a triple by Demaree.

Bill Cissell, obtained by the Giants from the Baltimore Orioles Monday, played a fine game afield for the league champions but went hitless.

Let your friends tell you which BEER THEY LIKE BEST

Make the BREWMASER'S TEST and discover why so many choose Falstaff's all-grain flavor

Here's an easy way to find out how your friends vote on the beer question! Have them make the Brewmaster's Test. Bring out some frosty bottles of Falstaff and put the question up to the Jury of Three—the eyes, nose and mouth. See if everybody doesn't say with plenty of conviction, "Make Mine Falstaff!"

Look at Falstaff! You're looking at beer that's as clear as noonday sun. Pick up a newspaper and read it through that sparkling clarity. That's because Falstaff is double-filtered and aged the slow, expensive way that ordinary beers can't afford.

Smell Falstaff! Get a whiff of that rich, clean aroma of sun-ripened grain. It takes the finest materials (Falstaff spends more for them per bottle than 9 out of 10 breweries) to produce the rare aroma which is the hallmark of the finest beers.

Taste Falstaff! Lift your glass and enjoy that full-bodied flavor and thirst-chasing goodness. Here's beer that's lighter . . . a brew that cheers you up and cools you off like a morning breeze!

Order a case of Falstaff today. Join the swing to this better beer that sold 194,000,000 bottles of Falstaff last year. Falstaff Brewing Corporation, St. Louis—Omaha—New Orleans.

"THE CHOICEST PRODUCT OF THE BREWERS' ART"

Scarlet Role Is Refused by Norma

Miss Shearer's Fans Compel Withdrawal From "Gone With Wind"

By HUBBARD KEAVY
HOLLYWOOD — (P) — The public never will know how many of its letter writers became indignant over the casting of Norma Shearer as Scarlett O'Hara.

SOUR TEMPERERS MADE SWEET

When you are cross, irritable and grouchy, when you find fault with the coffee, the eggs, the bacon, and the cook, you may well suspect that you have a touch of biliousness or so-called "torpid liver," so prevalent in hot weather. All you may need is a little calomel, or better still, "Calotabs," the nausealess calomel compound tablets that make calomel-taking a pleasure.

Calotabs give you the combined effects of calomel and salts, helping Nature to expel the sour, stagnant bile and washing it out of the system. One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of water—that's all. Next morning your system feels clean and refreshed, your head is clear, your spirit bright, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish and go about your work or pleasure.

Genuine Calotabs are sold only in checker-board (black and white) packages bearing the trade mark "Calotabs." Refuse imitations. Trial package, ten cents; family package only twenty-five cents, at your dealer's. (Adv.)

The number was sufficient, anyway, to cause Miss Shearer to tell Producer David Selznick, as she formally announced Monday, that she thought herself unsuited as the leading lady of his "Gone With the Wind."

In making and breaking stars, Hollywood has learned that fan mail must be taken into account. It has been suggested that the naming of Miss Shearer might have been a straw in the wind. If it was, it got results.

Miss Shearer obviously took her cue from her mail.

And so, the public having spoken the nominating list for Hollywood's most discussed casting is again open.

Your guess as to who will replace Norma in Selznick's favor is as good as anyone's Tallulah Bankhead may be in the running again. Many still like Katharine Hepburn and hundreds once voted for Margaret Sullivan. Miriam Hopkins is another whose name is often linked with Rhett Butler's. Incidentally, Clark Gable still is set for that role, although the all-important papers have yet to be signed.

When the Selznick studio heard of Miss Shearer's statement it came up with a statement:

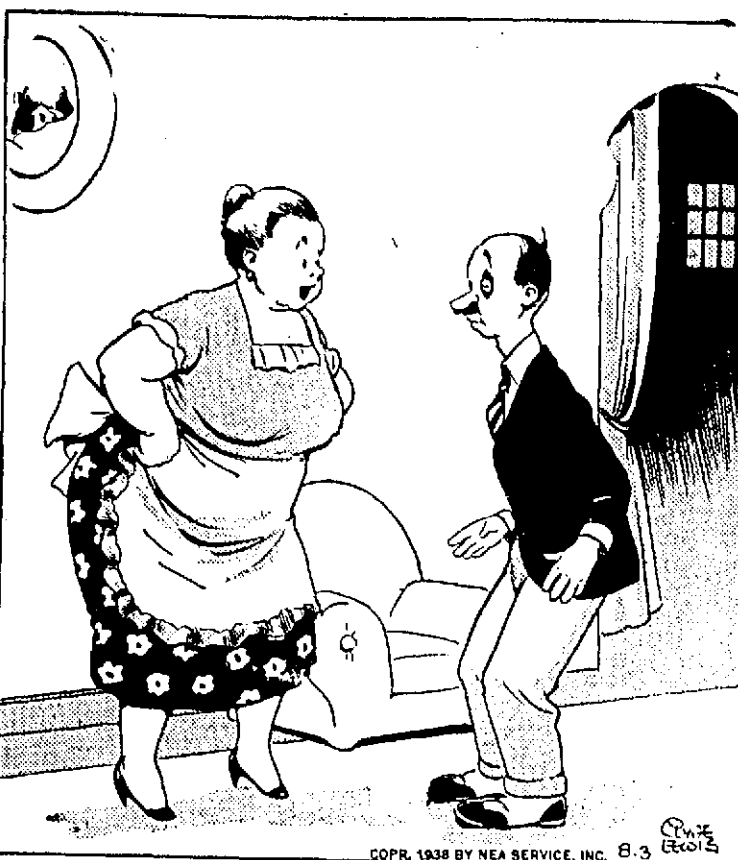

"We will immediately begin a new search for an unknown to play the role of Scarlett O'Hara. We may not find her, but we will send out talent scouts once more."

Selznick believes he'll have a new star after it's all over.

The new 72-passenger trans-Atlantic plane being built for Pan American Airways will weigh 82,500 pounds and have four engines developing 15,000 horsepower each, and have three blades propellers whose diameter are 14 feet.

It is estimated that the average air-mail letter travels 1538 miles, while the ordinary letter travels 469 miles.

Hold Everything!

"So you're sorry you came home with a black eye last night! Let me inform you that you didn't have it until you GOT home!"

The Depression Hits Cambodia's Ballet

THEY'RE seeking a balanced budget, too, in Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, Far East protectorate of French Indo-China. And to whittle down expenses 63-year-old King Sisowath Monivong plans to "fire" half of his dancing-girl harem. He's going to reduce the retinue to a mere 100.

But the king's dancers won't go on relief. That's because Cambodia actually suffers a Janor shortage, and secondly, and more important, because the king's ex-wives are members of a popular and highly-honored profession, the Cambodian ballet.

Cambodia is the home of the classical ballet. Archaeologists have pretty well established that the royal ballet, as depicted on crumbling walls of the Khmers, is a very ancient dance and was executed in the dim centuries with rare talent and emotion.

Today, training for the ballet is serious business in Cambodia. Fortunate little girls chosen for the royal troupe begin training at eight. But actually their mothers have been training them for many years earlier. Not that there is any money in the art. About 10 years ago some of them actually went on strike for better working conditions. But the ballet does lend prestige. The humblest dancer seeks this. A Cambodian native girl is shown here on an early stamp of Indo-China.

Great National Leaders Praise Mrs. Caraway

In replies to recent inquiries from Arkansas Citizens, Senator Caraway has been praised by Colleagues for her energy, initiative and thorough grasp of public questions.

"Your Friend and Mine" ---

Franklin D. Roosevelt

"Confidence and Esteem of Every Senator ... Gratitude of the President"

Senator Caraway holds the esteem and confidence of all of her fellow Senators. She has demonstrated her energy and initiative and thorough grasp of public questions. I have had legislative matters before Committees of which she is a member and have had an opportunity to know of her able and skillful work as a legislator. And let it be remembered that the principal legislative work done by a United States Senator is in Committees where legislation is framed.

I must confess that prior to Senator Caraway's entry into the Senate I had grave doubts as to whether a woman could adapt herself to the work of the Senate. I am sure that other Senators had the same uneasiness. Certainly Senator Caraway's service is comparable to that of any other Senator. No Senator has the slightest restraint in acting with her in legislative matters.

She is, of course, a charming, womanly woman, but she makes not attempt whatever to seek any special privileges. She deals courteously but firmly and frankly with her associates and relies solely upon her knowledge, energy, powers of analysis and clarity of expression. She has fought for every interest of her State and her Nation. She holds not only the confidence and esteem of every Senator, but also the confidence and gratitude of the President of the United States.

—KEY PITTMAN, U. S. Senator from Nevada

President Pro Tem of the Senate.

"Exceptional Qualities of Industry and Ability"

She is held in the highest esteem by all her colleagues. Her exceptional qualities of modesty, industry and ability are recognized by all, and command their respect and admiration. Her sincerity of purpose, loyalty to Party and devotion to the cause and welfare of her State and country have been most outstanding. She has reflected credit upon her State, Party, and the womanhood of America.

—PAT HARRISON, U. S. Senator from Mississippi

"No Man has Rendered More Valuable Service"

I have had exceptional opportunities to observe the "Lady from Arkansas," because, for years, we have been members of two great committees of the Senate—the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and the Committee on Library.

The Committee on Agriculture has framed farm relief legislation. For weeks and months at a time, its sessions have been almost continuous. Its decisions have meant the difference between wretched poverty and a reasonable standard of living for the farmers of our country.

I am betraying no committee secret when I say that no man on that committee has rendered more valuable service to the farmers of Arkansas and America than Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway.

Through the work of the Committee on Library, we have built up here in Washington what is probably the most remarkable library in all the world. It is called the Library of Congress, but, as a matter of fact, its almost unlimited stores of knowledge are open to every boy and girl in America. Here Mrs. Caraway has done some of her finest work.

—ELMER THOMAS, U. S. Senator from Oklahoma

"Inspiration to All Women Members of Congress"

As a woman, as well as a member of the House of Representatives, I pay tribute to her administration as United States Senator from Arkansas. The efficient and thorough manner in which she administers the great responsibilities of her office as United States Senator, has been an inspiration to all the women members of the Congress. It has been my observation that she has won the respect, the confidence and the co-operation of all of the members of the Congress. I hope you will tell the voters of Arkansas, especially the women voters of Arkansas, that I regard Hattie W. Caraway as a genuine successor to that great citizen, Joseph T. Robinson.
